Participants learn to tools from leading sources such as the World Health Organisation and Steven Covey (Circle of Influence) that they can use to proactively build their resilience and additional tools to employ in those tough times to maintain their reserves.

This workshop has a work-related lens, however, many participants comment on the positive impact these skills had on all aspects of their life. The workshop includes aspects of neuroscience, and people learn to recognise their decision making, attitude and feeling about a situation as a result of chemical releases, and how to refresh and move forward more positively.

This is where science meets the workplace to build greater productivity and happier, more resilient people.

This is a practical class that is suitable for all audiences and provides people with the tools that they can apply on-the-job (and in other contexts) the very next day.

This live online workshop teaches facilitation skills and to help get better outcomes and better quality decision making at work.

This is an instructor-led class that you can attend from home or your office.

The virtual classroom uses an advanced version of Zoom called 'Zoom for Webinars' that includes enhanced collaboration features such as One-click content sharing, real-time co-annotation (people can work together in activity files), and digital whiteboarding, and we use tools such as live polls, private group chats and participants can 'raise their hand' so you virtually have the same collaborative classroom based learning experience.

These courses are facilitated in English and are open to people from different industries across Australia, New Zealand, Singapore, Malaysia and Hong Kong - this is a short but powerful learning experience that gives you global collaboration opportunities.
